You may have been startled recently by a loud crashing noise as you've been sipping your Sunday morning coffee in the foyer of the Space at Playford. A large pile of wooden blocks has appeared in the foyer and the kids love to build towers to see how high they can make them, before they collapse loudly. The kids quickly learn the lesson that the stability of the structure depends an awful lot on the integrity of the foundation. A strong foundation allows for a more stable building.

The same is true in so many areas of life. Building a new house requires a strong concrete foundation. Playing sport well requires the foundation of solid footwork. Relationships require a good foundation of love and trust.

But it's not just specific areas of our lives that need a good foundation. Our life as a whole is built on certain foundations – culture, beliefs, background, upbringing, personality, education etc. So, how do we know if our life is built on a foundation that has integrity, one that we can trust, one that won't come crashing down?

This Sunday we will finish our #SOBLESSED series with a familiar story from Matthew 7:24-29. It's a story about foundations. A story about wisdom and foolishness. The contrast of security and catastrophe. I trust you'll join us as we search out the pathway to true Wisdom.

I hope to see you there, Henry
